This course examines the history of American law from the colonial period into the present. To do so we will examine case law, secondary literature written by legal scholars, and cultural representations of the law over time. The course explores first how the concept and practice of law changed through such transformative events as the Revolution, the emergence of a market economy, the Civil War, the rise of the large federal state, the civil rights revolution, and more. The class will also interrogate the ways in which the legal system treated people of different genders, races, classes, religions, and sexualities differently and in doing so, helped produce those categories. In other words, how has the law both reflected and created inequality over time? Finally we will explore the separation between the ways in which the law was written, understood, and lived. Prerequisites: Hum 101, Hum 102 and one from among Hum 211, Hum 212, and Hum 213 or their equivalents with a grade C or better.

Learning Outcomes

- a) track the changes and continuities in the American legal system

- b) identify how these changes came to pass in class discussion and written assignments
- c) engage in debate on the relationship between power and the law
- d) assess interpretive approaches and biases in secondary sources
- e) make arguments using legal documents as primary sources
- f) relate historical changes to present day legal issues
- g) demonstrate information literacy through the use of appropriate source material and original research and the ability to cite properly. To excel in this course, you are expected to be able to locate and use web AND library resources effectively and cite them correctly. Davida Scharf is an expert researcher and our librarian for the History Department. She has prepared online research guides that you may find useful. She is available for help during her office hours, or by appointment. Her contact information, calendar, and research guides are available here: <http://researchguides.njit.edu/scharf>. Please take advantage of her expertise.

The following assignments will gauge students' success with these learning outcomes. Students will be graded on a scale where 100-90 percent is an A; 89.9-80 is a B; 79.9-70 is a C; 69.9-60 is a D; and 59.9 and below is an F.

- 1) Participation and careful reading of the assigned texts. This class will mix lecture and discussion. You will be evaluated on whether you actively and regularly participate in discussion. This will look different during our synchronous online course than it does in face-to-face classrooms. I do not expect you to keep your camera on (though I do hope for some cute pet sightings from at least some of you over the course of the semester). But I will evaluate you on whether you speak up in class, on the chat, in polls, and in the online activities. (150 points)
- 2) Weekly discussion board posts. These should QUOTE at least one of that week's assigned readings. Each response should be at least a paragraph long and address the theme I assign for that week. Responses that fulfill the assignment will receive full credit. The response is due on Wednesday by midnight. (250 points)
- 3) 2-3 page short paper. In this paper, you should select a case on slavery on Nexis-Uni and place it in its historical context. You may not use cases we read in class. Use the case to make an argument about the assumptions the ruling demonstrates about slavery and the rule of law before the Civil War. This paper is designed to help you learn to use Nexis-Uni and to use legal cases as historical documents. Due OCTOBER 1. (250 points)
- 4) 8-10 page final paper. In this paper, you will be responsible for writing a historical brief on a recent US Supreme Court Case that you will select from several options I provide you. Your aim is to use historical research to support one side of the case. For example, you might show that the "tradition" a law was based on has no historical basis or that the circumstances that justified that law have changed over time. We will examine sample cases in class that were influenced by historical reasoning in order to get a sense of what this should look like. Due DECEMBER 15. (300 points) You will first turn in a 1-2 page proposal stating what case, which side, what sources, and what historical vantage point you will be using. Due NOVEMBER 19. (50 points)

- 5) SERVICE LEARNING OPTION. You may opt to participate in a pilot service learning option for this course. In this option you will spend 20-30 hours volunteering online with a local organization that deals with law or policy-related issues. Some potential collaborators include the ACLU, the Donald Payne School mock trial team, etc. This is an opportunity for you to put your skills to use in the community, to gain new real-world skills, and make professional connections. At the end you will turn in a 3 page paper describing how this class informed your volunteering. Instead of the 8-10 page final paper, your historian's brief will be reduced to 5-6 pages. The option will also translate into a small amount of extra credit (approximately 50 points). You must decide by October 1 whether you will participate in the service learning option. DUE DECEMBER 1.

Code of Conduct:

--This semester will be an extraordinary one in many ways, and I think patience with one another will be our only way of making it through. I will be as understanding as I can be along the way with the sole exception of academic dishonesty (see below). If you have any trouble, confusion, or worry, please reach out. We can figure something out.

--Though I hope we disagree on many different issues, I expect you to treat the class, your fellow students, and me with respect at all times.

-- Academic Integrity is the cornerstone of higher education and is central to the ideals of this course and the university. Cheating is strictly prohibited and devalues the degree that you are working on. As a member of the NJIT community, it is your responsibility to protect your educational investment by knowing and following the academic code of integrity policy that is found at:

<http://www5.njit.edu/policies/sites/policies/files/academic-integrity-code.pdf>.

Please note that it is my professional obligation and responsibility to report any academic misconduct to the Dean of Students Office. Any student found in violation of the code by cheating, plagiarizing or using any online software inappropriately will result in disciplinary action. This may include a failing grade of F, and/or suspension or dismissal from the university. If you have any questions about the code of Academic Integrity, please contact the Dean of Students Office at dos@njit.edu
