DISCLOSURE OF SUPPORT STATEMENT OF CONTRIBUTIONS [TEMPLATE]

Overview: This document provides a mechanism for disclosing and acknowledging the human and software support received when creating, refining, polishing, and distributing content. It goes beyond the cited sources in a document to allow for the disclosure of AI assistance and other sources of content and expertise that assisted in the creation of works. In addition, it allows for the identification of the varying levels of involvement and differing roles named authors play in the collaborative content creation and dissemination process.

Title of work:

Authors and roles

This section describes each author's roles and responsibilities during the creation of the work.

Acknowledgment of individuals, groups, and organizations

This section identifies and explains anyone who was consulted or assisted in the work process, including faculty, colleagues, peers, family, students, friends, tutors, librarians, and paid consultants.

Acknowledgment of software support

This section is used to identify and explain the software tools needed for the completion of the work. It especially allows for the transparent disclosure of the degree of contribution made by AI tools that generate content, revise work, suggest content, or otherwise aid the authors, such as Grammarly, ChatGPT, QuillBot, etc.

Acknowledgment of other sources of content

This section is used to identify and explain any other sources of content, authority, and/or support you incorporated into this work beyond what is cited in the work (in-text and reference page) and the disclosure listed above.

Additional acknowledgments

This section is used to acknowledge other means of support or contributions to the completion of the work.

Sources

This section is used to cite any works or provide additional resources that might help the users of the content understand this disclosure or the work itself and the process by which it was generated.
