Course Description

This seminar closely examines historical and contemporary situations of multiculturalism, including globalization, migration, and urban diversification. It is designed to afford NJIT students the ability to encounter and analyze ideas about multiculturalism and “intercultural relations”, both in artistic representations (i.e. literature, film) and in scientific study (i.e. sociological/historical analyses). Students’ researched and written work in this course ranges from analysis of fiction to consideration of cultural diversity in urban planning and the development of technologies and technological systems. The culmination of the course is a research project of the student’s own design, reflecting course themes in relation to his or her field of study and/or the professional sectors he or she will be entering upon graduation.

Course overview & curriculum:

A common thread among the many definitions of multiculturalism is the emphasis on relationships formed between various cultures. These relationships are part of our everyday, globalizing experiences, both personally and professionally. Through our coursework, we will explore these relationships as they manifest through the arts, but also as they have been observed by scientific study. The first section of the course examines how selected authors define and reflect on relevant terms, from “culture” / “multiculturalism” to race and globalization. The second section of the course explores the politics of representation, especially considering how the methodologies of disciplines such as history and sociology impact those politics. In the third section of the course, we will examine primary source material that applies ideas and concepts learned from sections 1 and 2. The final section of the course addresses migration – both real and fictional – and considers its relevancy to personal and professional contexts. The course will close with virtual presentations of the on-going research project.

Works to be studied include short stories, essays, empirical research studies and films by several international authors and activists, including Ta-Nehisi Coates, Toni Morrison, Amy Tan and .

Prerequisites for this class include completion of the GUR in English (3 credits), Cultural History (6 credits), Basic -Social Sciences (6 credits) and either the Lit/ Hist/Phil/STS (3 credits) or the Open Elective in Humanities and Social Science (3 credits).

The only book required for this course is Illegal by Eoin Colfer (2018, Sourcebooks, ISBN: 978-1492665823). It is available as an e-book and any version of the book you would like. It in paperback. You can purchase and read should cost less than $20.

All other texts have been made available on Moodle, and are organized by date.
Ongoing Course Objectives

- Demonstrate an understanding of disciplinary theories that emerge through course notes/instruction and course readings
- Demonstrate eventual proficiency with analysis of creative works and their use as political expression, including art, film, literature and creative non-fiction.
- Demonstrate improvement with this analysis over the course of the semester by responding effectively to instructor feedback and directives.
- Demonstrate proficiency with information literacy by producing a multi-layered, bibliographic research project, including formal and informal web-based research discussions, the production of several research proposals and an annotated bibliography, and an 8-10 page final paper investigating a question or argument related to our coursework and drawing in part from our course readings.
- Demonstrate consistent engagement with classmates and the professor through discussion forum and other posting activities.
- Demonstrate “online” leadership and initiative capabilities by facilitating conversations within the discussion forum, responding effectively to classmates in a digital environment and directing attention to texts/coursework/research in the online forum.

Coursework Overview

Class Meetings: This class is delivered 100% online. However, it is not a self-paced course. There are required weeks of real-time, near synchronous interaction. This means we have both research and discussion forums, and that you are expected to meet basic deadlines and requirements for each. The class is divided into 4 thematic units, or modules. Each module consists of 4 weeks, and will include reading assignments, writing assignments, and classmate interaction via discussion board posting. A researched term project incorporating coursework will be submitted at the end of the semester.

Module & Discussion Forum Pattern

First week: Topic intro via first round of readings and notes – independent pacing with suggested milestones

Second week: Reading week – independent pacing with suggested milestones

Third Week: Research Forum – collaborative and interactive discussion with deadlines

Fourth Week: Discussion Forum – collaborative and interactive discussion with deadline
Research Forum exercises will contain specific directions. Generally, you will be expected to post a secondary source with annotations to the forum by Thursday of the Research Forum week, and a follow-up by Sunday. Discussion Forum exercises include an open week for posting. You will be expected to make at least 3 posts through the week (i.e. Monday, Wednesday, Friday) for all the forums. Higher grades go to students who participate in a sustained way through a forum week. Lower grades go to students who complete all the required posts at the last minute. While the former demonstrates preparation, sustained engagement and awareness of audience, the latter gives the opposite impression: neglect and lack of consideration for the group’s ability to interact with your ideas. We are all busy. Plan for these forum weeks; there are few throughout the semester and they impact your ongoing course engagement grade significantly. Discussion Forum posts are part of synchronous interactions and cannot be submitted late. Partial credit will be applied to students who complete Research Forum exercises within one week of the deadline. Students must email the instructor to receive approval for a late submission.

There will be optional face-to-face information and discussion sessions scheduled throughout the semester (usually during “week 1” of a Module). Students who attend these sessions will receive extra credit for their ongoing course engagement grade.

Written Work Beyond Forum Posts

Reading/Comprehension quizzes: This course is divided into different modules, or “Sections”. While the skills of critical reading and analysis, writing in digital environments, writing/communicating analytical ideas and research are ongoing throughout the course, course content and reading will differ in each unit. It is imperative that students keep pace with the course reading / lesson schedule, as the units build upon each other. Quizzes will therefore be administered periodically through the course. They will include multiple choice questions on the assigned readings, as well as short-answer questions demonstrating student’s engagement with the assigned work. Critical feedback on these questions will direct students toward what he or she needs to focus on more specifically in preparation for the final project.

Research project: Multiculturalism in Literature will allow students to draw on knowledge gained from previous courses and work closely with the instructor to develop a substantial and in-depth research project. The project will enable students to construct a program of research, investigation and documentation that enhances understanding of course work and offers an opportunity to better understand the implementation of relevant research in argumentative writing. Though sources researched can vary in format for different aspects of the course, it is important to understand that only well-documented and credible sources can be cited in the final research project. MLA, APA, Chicago or Harvard-style guidelines for references, in-text citations, and bibliographies must be followed. Papers submitted that do not adhere to these guidelines will not receive credit.

Late assignments:

Discussion forum posting happens in real-time and thus cannot be made up. Students receiving the highest grades for discussion forum work post consistently through the module, and follow directions regarding the posts (see notes above on discussion forum exercises). Making all required posts at once and at the end of the module suggests poor planning and neglect of the assignment, and does not allow for other students (or the instructor) to interact with your ideas.

Research projects submitted late will lose 1 grade point per day (ie from a B to a C). Work submitted 48 hours after the stated deadline will receive NO credit. Receipt of final papers is verified through TurnItIn or instructor email. If you do not receive a return receipt within four hours of sending the final paper, it is your responsibility to follow up and ensure your paper has been received.

Plagiarism, presenting someone else’s words, thoughts, or ideas (in whole or in part) as your own, is cheating and will not be tolerated. The NJIT Honor Code will be upheld, and any violations will be brought to the immediate attention of the Dean of Students. NJIT enforces strict academic integrity policies, and any plagiarized material will result in a failing grade for the assignment and possibly for the course. Academic probation and possible suspension or expulsion from the university may also be pursued by NJIT administration in cases of plagiarism. Three very important things to remember:

1) Various plagiarism-detection tools are employed in this course.
2) There have been numerous cases of students attempting to submit papers written by students enrolled in earlier versions of this class. These students have received failing grades and academic probation – and the students supplying the papers have also been punished.
3) If you’re struggling with the final project or concerned about these policies, I’m happy to work with you! Plagiarism is not worth the risk to your future.
